

Statutory retention periods

The table below summarises the main UK legislation regulating statutory retention periods. If employers are in doubt, it's a good idea to keep records for at least 6 years (5 in Scotland), to cover the time limit for bringing any civil legal action.

Record	Statutory retention period	Statutory authority accident books, accident records/reports	3 years from the date of the last entry (or, if the accident involves a child/ young adult, then until that person reaches the age of 21). (See below for accidents involving chemicals or asbestos)	The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995 (RIDDOR) (SI 1995/3163) as amended, and Limitation Act 1980. Special rules apply concerning incidents involving hazardous substances (see below).
accounting records	3 years for private companies, 6 years for public limited companies	Section 221 of the Companies Act 1985 as modified by the Companies Acts 1989 and 2006
income tax and NI returns, income tax records and correspondence with HMRC	not less than 3 years after the end of the financial year to which they relate	The Income Tax (Employments) Regulations 1993 (SI 1993/744) as amended, for example by The Income Tax (Employments)

Statutory Maternity Pay records, calculations, certificates (Mat B1s) or other medical evidence	3 years after the end of the tax year in which the maternity period ends	The Statutory Maternity Pay (General) Regulations 1986 (SI 1986/1960) as amended wage/salary records (also overtime, bonuses, expenses)	6 years	Taxes Management Act 1970
national minimum wage records	3 years after the end of the pay reference period following the one that the records cover	National Minimum Wage Act 1998
records relating to working time	2 years from date on which they were made	The Working Time Regulations 1998 (SI 1998/1833)

Recommended (non-statutory) retention periods

For many types of HR records, there is no definitive retention period: it is up to the employer to decide how long to keep them. Different organisations make widely differing decisions about the retention periods to adopt. An employer must consider what would be a necessary retention period for them, depending on the type of record. The advice in this factsheet is based on the time limits for potential tribunal or civil claims, which is often a question of judgement rather than there being any definitive right and wrong. For example, some records managers in public sector organisations recommend keeping an employee's records until they reach the age of 100, especially for pension purposes.

Where the recommended retention period is 6 years, this is based on the 6-year time limit within which legal proceedings must be commenced under the Limitation Act 1980. So where documents may be relevant to a contractual claim, it's recommended that these are kept for at least the corresponding 6-year limitation period.

Record	Recommended retention period
actuarial valuation reports	Permanently application forms and interview notes (for unsuccessful candidates)	6 months to a year. (Because of the time limits in the various discrimination Acts, minimum retention periods for records relating to advertising of vacancies and job applications should be at least 6 months. A year may be more advisable as the time limits for bringing claims can be extended. Successful job applicants documents will be transferred to the personnel file in any event.
assessments under health and safety regulations and records of consultations with safety representatives and committees	permanently
Inland Revenue/HMRC approvals	Permanently
money purchase details	6 years after transfer or value taken
Parental leave	5 years from birth/adoption of the child or 18 years if the child receives a disability allowance
Pension scheme investment policies	12 years from the ending of any benefit payable under the policy
Pensioners' records	12 years after benefit ceases
personnel files and training records (including disciplinary records and working time records)	6 years after employment ceases
redundancy details, calculations of payments, refunds, notification to the Secretary of State	6 years from the date of redundancy
senior executives' records (that is, those on a senior management team or their equivalents)	permanently for historical purposes
Statutory Sick Pay records, calculations, certificates, self-certificates	The Statutory Sick Pay (Maintenance of Records) (Revocation) Regulations 2014 (SI 2014/55) abolished the former obligation on employers to keep these records. Although there is no longer a specific statutory retention period, employers still have to keep sickness records to best suit their business needs. It is advisable to keep records for at least 3 months after the end of the period of sick leave in case of disability discrimination claim. However if there were to be a contractual claim for breach of an employment contract it may be safer to keep records for 6 years after the employment ceases
Time cards	2 years after audit
Trade union agreements	10 years after ceasing to be effective
Trust deeds and rules	Permanently
Trustees minutes books	Permanently
Work council minutes	Permanently
